

World's Champions In Thrilling Action

BASKETBALL FANS WERE GIVEN OUTSTANDING
TREAT SATURDAY

Wainwright was on a high for practically the whole day (and half the night) on Saturday last, when the world famous basketball team, known by the appellation of Edmonton Commercial Grads, and their sister team the Gradiettes (from which indeed, many of the senior team have risen to fame) visited the town to display their prowess in exhibition games at the fair grounds.

The team under the chaperonage of Mrs. Percy Page, and marshalled by that delightful lady's husband, their indefatigable coach, in addition to the Gradiettes and their manager, Mr. W. T. Bell, arrived on the morning train, and all were guests of honor at the Wainwright hotel at a luncheon at which Mr. J. Macdonald, president of the Board of Trade, acted as chairman.

Following the lunch, at which some sixty citizens were present, Mrs. H. L. Cameron read an address of welcome as follows:

"To Mr. and Mrs. Page—
"We, the citizens of Wainwright, deem it an honor, as well as a great pleasure, to be able to greet you and the world famous Grads, in our home town."

"The Grads, world famous, the Gradiettes, champions in the making, Canadian born, raised for the greater part in Alberta, we in Wainwright claim them as partly ours. And you, Mr. Page have been able to recognise the stuff our native-born girls are made of—diamonds in the rough. You have been able to take them individually and polish them; them, like

REGULAR MEETING OF GRIZZLY BEAR M.D.

The council of the M.D. of Grizzly Bear, No. 452, met at Wainwright on August 10th, with Reeve Shane presiding, and all Councilors present.

Minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Memo from the Department was submitted with approval of Mr. G. Gibson as auditor.

On motion of Mr. Freidland, E. C. Symes was re-appointed deputy reeve for the remainder of the term.

Various appeals for assistance were read, and on motion of Mr. Purser it was agreed to limit donations to a payment of $25 to the Vermilion school fair.

A case of chicken pox in Div. 4 was reported by Dr. Knoll.

Report was made as to municipal conference held in Vermilion, July 23rd, and attended by Reeve Shane, Councilor Freidland, and the secretary.

Monthly report from the weed inspector, A. H. Ford, was read, giving details of three days' travel and interviews in the municipality.

Copy of a proposed new Noxious Weeds Act was submitted from the council of the Alberta municipal districts association, with a request that any proposed amendments should be forwarded by Oct. 1st.

In view of dissatisfaction in regard to certain road deviations, on motion of Mr. Purser, it was agreed that in future, road deviations be approved by two councillors before request for official survey be passed by the Council.

Fire Guardians were appointed to act in each division in conjunction with the Councilor thereof; viz. Div. 1, Mr. A. G. Coutts; Div. 2, Mr. A. H. Ramussen; Div. 3, Mr. Green; Div. 4, Mr. Bishop; Div. 5, Mr. Rankin; Div. 6, Mr. D. Jack.

Health affairs with hospital and medical matters were before the Council; Islay hospital returned copy of proposed agreement, with statement that while favorable to it, the Board preferred not to sign at present; Lacombe hospital submitted a list of seven ratepayers who had been treated there, and had left unpaid balances totaling $275.00; Royal Alexandra hospital forwarded a statement as to a resident who had received ninety-five days' hospital treatment; Islay and Wainwright medical accounts were tabled for enquiry and consideration.

Mr. M. Mahan waited on the Council regarding valuation and taxes of N.W. 32-49-5; and Mr. M. Sharpe, as to road deviation on N. of 33-47-3, for an inspection of which road the Council adjourned at 3:30 p. m.

Accounts passed totaled $705.

Next meeting will be held, Monday, Sept. 14th.

the most expert jeweler, to produce a diadem with each jewel placed where it will shine best. And yet they must be viewed as a whole in the setting as created by yourself to get the full effect of the creation.

"We recognize that you have spent many weary hours polishing, moulding, building, and we rejoice with you that your efforts have been crowned with success.

"We have suitably appropriated part of the honor as Canadians and Albertans, but we do acknowledge that the highest credit is due to Mrs. Page and yourself for the way you have looked after our girls and the possibilities in the way of sport attainment you have shown to our Canadian youth."

"As a token of our appreciation and respect, we humbly offer you these small mementoes and trust that both you and your girls may live long to spread the gospel of good, clean sport."

From the hands of the Mayor, who also added the welcome to that of the chairman, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Page were then the recipients of tokens in the form of a large framed buffalo picture and an elk serving tray, and in addition to these, each one of the visitors received a miniature framed buffalo picture.

In responding, Mr. Page on behalf of the team, remarked the real pleasure it gave them all to visit the outlying points in the province for the purpose of showing the manner in which the Grads "put over their work" and for the benefit such exhibitions might prove, in enhancing the value of good clean sport more especially along the lines of basketball.

He mentioned, also, that as he saw it, all sport to be worthwhile had to be conducted along these same lines to prove valuable to the youth of our country, and closed by expressing the hearty thanks of Mrs. Page and himself, as well as each of the girls for the truly royal welcome which had been extended to them all by Wainwright.

In reply to this, Mr. Macdonald expressed the real pleasure which Wainwright citizens felt at the opportunity of having the visitors as guests, and closed by calling upon Cap. E. Kidd (the "Daddy" of the whole project) to which Cap. Kidd in a few words suitably replied.

During the afternoon a cavalcade of automobiles, led by Mr. Dave Davidson, of the park, gave the visitors an insight into the natural beauties of the Buffalo park, and for several hours the girls were busy "snapping" pictures of buffalo, elk, etc., as well

HERMAN TRELLE WILL WRITE FOR "THE STAR"

WORLD CHAMPION GROWER OF
WHEAT TO GIVE FREE
INSTRUCTION

We are pleased to inform our farmer readers that we have made arrangements with Mr. Herman Trelle, Alberta farmer, internationally known grain exhibitor and world prize winner, for a series of ten articles on the growing, selection and preparation of grain and seed for exhibition.

Every phase of these exceedingly important subjects, arranged under over fifty headings in natural sequence, will be dealt with from Mr. Trelle's point of view. The purpose of the articles is to assist exhibitors at the big world's grain exhibition in Regina next year, in securing an exact knowledge of what to look for, when and where and how to work them in to a finished product. The articles commence with the prospects from this year's crop, samples from previous years, raising, harvesting, curing, thrashing, selecting, cleaning, uniformity, color, lustre, weight, shrinkage, etc., etc., to the final transportation of the exhibit—over fifty subjects dealt with in simple and plain language.

It is needless to point out the great importance of Mr. Trelle's articles which are written exclusively for the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference and are copyrighted.

By this arrangement with Mr. Trelle we believe we have succeeded in securing something of real value to every farmer of our district.

Each article contains approximately 1000 words, and the first will appear in about a couple of weeks in The Star.

EXPRESS FIRMS FIGHT TRUCK COMPETITION BY CUTTING DOWN RATES

OTTAWA—Determined to fight motor truck competition to a finish railway express companies are undertaking a comprehensive downward revision of tariffs. Several schedules of reduced rates have already been filed with the board of railway commissioners, it was learned Friday, and as a Dominion-wide survey of the situation is continued further decreases are to be made.

Questionnaires have been sent to express companies to manufacturers and jobbers in various parts of the country asking what rates would induce them to restore their patronage to the rail carriers. As the answers are received the companies are revising the schedules.

WHEAT PROPOSAL PLEASES TRADE

EXPECT OPEN-MARKETING
METHODS TO RULE IN CROP
DISPOSAL

WINNIPEG—Announcement from Ottawa of an orderly marketing system as applied to pool members with a 35 cents initial payment has had a steady effect on the trade of this centre.

Ottawa's special assurance that particular measures may be adopted by the government to prevent panic conditions developing, without specifying what those provisions are, has also heartened the trade. Further arrangements by which all pool members who desire are released from the obligations of their contract to dispose of their crop on the open market is accepted by the private grain firms as guarantee that open market methods will rule in the disposal of the crop now being taken from the well developed grain with average land.

The few cars of new wheat received by exchange members show normal yield. Since only about 65 per cent of the normal supply of binder twine has been distributed on the prairies it is thought this approximately measures the possible production of wheat, having regard to the short straw.

Prices are two and a half cents lower for twelve last year, the lowest price level since 1913.

Car licenses are now issued at half-price till October 1st, when there will be a further reduction. Joe Welch, issuer of plates for Wainwright district.

U.F.A. & U.F.W.A. Holds Convention

BIG GATHERING OF MEMBERS
JOIN IN PICNIC & SUB-
NESE SESSIONS

(Contributed)

The Battle River Federal U.F.A. Convention held in Wainwright on August 10th and 11th was well voted a success. The speeches and discussions were interesting, the picnic at the Park enjoyable and the vocal and violin music so kindly furnished through the kindness of Wainwright artists was a very great pleasure to all.

The convention was most fortunate in its speakers. Mrs. Barrett of Mirror, one of the pioneers in the U.F.W.A. and a former secretary, was a most interesting speaker and gave a most thought-provoking address; urging each one present to protest and to continue to protest against the injustices that exist.

Mr. Priestly, vice-president of the U.F.A., in a very able address outlined the situation in Western Canada and pointed out certain new factors affecting conditions; viz., enlarged areas of farming, power farming, tariff walls erected by other countries changing of the food habits of people and the re-emerging of Russia with a planned economy. Western Canada must have a planned economy to meet conditions and reduce the overhead of agriculture, and urge co-operation in buying and selling.

Mr. Sporkman, Federal member for Red Deer was heard by many for the first time and created a most favorable opinion of his ability through his addresses on social conditions and the part the U.F.A. plays.

Mr. Macdonald, M.L.A. of Alexandria was as forceful as usual and emphasized that while people continued to accept their opinions from high pressure salesmen instead of thinking for themselves they must not expect a high degree of satisfaction.

Mr. Love, M.L.A. of Wainwright wittily drove home many arguments in support of co-operation.

Mr. Spencer's Report

The following is a brief outline of a very full report given by the Battle River member of the activities of the House of Commons during the past session.

In reference to the Speech from the Throne, particular attention was drawn to the following items:

(1) Increase of Federal responsibility for Old Age Pensions to 75%.

(2) $750,000 grant per annum to the Provinces for technical education for 15 years.

(3) Highway construction.

(4) Prohibition of imports from Soviet Russia.

(5) Tariff revisions were promised.

(6) Legislation for a Tariff Board.

(7) Amendment to the Nationalization Act.

(8) Copyright Act.

(9) Aid was promised to Agriculture.

(10) Further assistance for marketing of wheat.

(11) The Speech claimed that the September Tariff Legislation had benefited the domestic situation.

(12) A Provincial Conference was being called in April to consider resolutions of 1930 Imperial Conference.

(13) Radio legislation was postponed until opinion of Courts was obtained.

(14) The Government believed that Canada was soon to enter a period of prosperity.

The amendment by Mr. Mackenzie King and sub-amendment by Mr. Robert Gardner were read by Mr. Spencer.

The general viewpoints of the four groups in the House as enunciated by their representatives were then outlined.

With regard to the budget, high lights were given with some care, and the amendment by Mr. Ralston and sub-amendment by himself were read to the Convention.

For the benefit of those who had not read his budget speech, Mr. Spencer dealt with the chief subjects he had brought to the attention of the House of Commons.

The work of the very many important committees was referred to.

As is usual, in his annual report, Mr. Spencer gave a list of the public and private bills passed by the House and also a list of the important divisions.

Officers for the coming year were elected as follows:

President, Walter Skinner of Riverton, vice-president, Mrs. Swayne of Paradise Valley. Directors, Mr. C. East, for Vermilion; Mr. B. C. Lees, for Wainwright; Mr. L. Green, for Alexandria; and Mr. R. A. Beck, for Ralston.

ALBERTA SAMPLES OF GRAIN CHOSEN

AGRICULTURAL EXHIBITS WILL NOT BE SHOWN AT U.S.
FAIRS THIS YEAR

Samples of the new crop in wheat, grain, and grasses have been secured by the department of agriculture for exhibition purposes, in accordance with the usual practice. Frank Peterson, of the department staff, has collected a large assortment from the Edmonton, Wainwright, Lacombe, Oils, Claresholm and Brooks districts taking them in most cases from the government and experimental farms.

The quality of the samples this year is said to be particularly high, showing growth and development in both grains and grasses as good as ever before. All the samples taken will be reserved for future exhibition purposes, reserving the exhibits that the government already has on hand.

OF COURSE, THEY DID IT AGAIN!

The Edmonton Commercial Grads, World's Champions for very many years in the field of Ladies' Basketball, who demonstrated their wonderful skill again at Wainwright on Saturday last in exhibition games with their sister team of "Gradiettes." The personnel of the team which played here was: Elsie Bennie, capt., Margaret McBurney, Doris Neale, Helen S'one, Edith Stone, Nilly McCormick, Gladys Fry, and Babe Selanger. Shown above with their coach Mr. Percy Page, they look every bit as smart as the team's record for years has proved them!

LOVE GETS EVEN :

She was on her way home from finishing school. Barbara Ann's smart little roadster was packed to the brim with suitcases, hat boxes, and twelve presents for her dad—one for every month of the year she had been away from him. And curled up on the folded top right in back of her rested and purred her brown-eyed brown-haired kitten, Priscilla.

Barbara Ann speeded up to get to the crossing before the green light should flash red, but instead there was the mad squeal of her brakes and Barbara Ann was destined to wait.

Russell Hayes was on his way home from his first year of college. His little coupe, undoubtedly a car with a college education, was overloaded until the body rubbed the bumps on the road and came down hard on the springs. Besides a small trunk, he had in there a grip, a portable typewriter, a golf bag with each and every stick, a couple of tennis rackets, skates, boxing gloves and a big garish-looking box tied with a big garish-looking bow. It was a act of leaving pajamas he was taking home to his mother. He had gone into the town's most feminine-looking shop, slipped down five ten-dollar bills, and said to an amused salesgirl:

"The most modern-looking thing you've got in the place. It's for my mother—she's small, good-looking and right up to tomorrow, that's how modern she is!"

As on the running board with his four feet braced against all odds was Russ's dog, Jevons, a smart, rollicking wire-haired terrier.

Russ promptly set his brakes and fished into his pockets for a cigarette to wait for the law to take its course. "Grr-grr-woof-art!"

"Past! Meow!"

Jevons had sprung from the running board in the flashing of a second, bounded over the side of Barbara Ann's car, and led Priscilla a merry chase down Barbara Ann's shoulder, across her lap, around her neck, and out into the street, past the corner and up a telegraph pole.

Instantly followed by Barbara Ann and Russ, their arms waving frantically, their voices mingling in a queer mixture of masculine sternness and feminine tenderness. "Jevons! Come here. Down Jevons! Come here, you idiot!"

And "Come Pris, poor little Priscilla! That's all right, mother's name. Nasty bad dog!"

Barbara Ann didn't pay the least attention to a rather bad scratch across her neck, and certainly none at all to the tall, handsome chap beside her. Her sole thought was to rescue Priscilla from that ferocious, unmanly, and unmanly, it appeared, was having the time of his life. Jevons is a pendulum suddenly gone mad; his tongue was hanging out and he was panting with the zest of the chase. He bounded up in the air, clutched the sides of the pole, fell to the side and then began all over again.

Priscilla didn't dare look behind her. She dug her claws deeper into the wood of the telegraph pole, and her tail lay flat, but her hair along her back bristled in sheer terror. "Jevons!" Russ shouted, and finally got him by the collar. "You ought to give the lady a chance to get her breath, Jevons!"

Barbara Ann turned on him with an angry gesture. Her eyes flashed with formidable anger. "I think you ought to keep a car like that under lock and key. If I had the time I'd have you arrested!"

Russ turned his back on her, got a grip upon one of the spikes on the telegraph pole and went up after Priscilla. The faster he climbed, the farther up the cat crawled. He tried to disguise his voice. "Nice puss, come along—poor kitty!"

But Priscilla turned deaf ears upon him. He came down, shrugged his shoulders, and met the amused grin on Barbara Ann's face with an expression of disgust. "I wouldn't own a cat, anyhow!"

"Well, I wouldn't own a dog!" she spluttered, and then looked sadly at the trembling Priscilla. "Here kitty, come, dear." But poor Priscilla seemed unable to move. Finally, Barbara Ann turned to the young man with a look that said she hated to ask a favor of him.

"I'm afraid you will have to give me a lift. I've got to go up that pole myself."

But Priscilla had crept part of the way down and Barbara Ann stood on tiptoe. "Come Pris. That's a dear; down easy there! Rest in my shoulder. Poor little thing! You're heart-

going like a whirlwind."

Barbara Ann held her hand over the kitten's eyes so it couldn't see the dog and said: "Sorry I had to bother you at all."

"Sorry, too!"

The light had turned green again. There was a mad mixture of different sounding horns, shouting, and finally a traffic officer came upon the scene, his face as red as a ripe tomato and fit to burst. "What do you think you are?" he spluttered. "Look at that traffic you've held up there—what do you think this is—parade?" He whipped out a book to take down their names.

But Jevons liked books, and with one bound, he jumped up, snatched the book and opened it up. "Suppose I take the car with it."

"We ought to go back, oughtn't we officer?" Barbara Ann smiled. "We're still detaining traffic."

There were no words for the officer just then, or at least it would have been against the law to utter them. "Drive your car to the side of the road both of you. Give me back my book. I'll have you both in jail for contempt of an officer."

Barbara Ann and Russ both got in to their cars and did as they were told. The traffic went smoothly on, not without, however, without a word of advice from each of the drivers of the other cars. Barbara Ann made a wry face, but Russ slid down into the seat of his car with his bag pulled low. He had retrieved the book from Jevons, but there wasn't much of the book left. He sheepishly tried to smooth it out as well as possible.

The officer went to Barbara Ann first. She showed him her license and explained. "I was only going after my cat—that dog over there chased it up that pole. I'm really not to blame. If anyone is arrested, it should be the owner of that pup." She turned her head away angrily.

Russ was instantly out of the car and standing before them. "I'll have you know, officer, if it hadn't been for her cat, my dog wouldn't have been disturbed and I would have been forty miles ahead."

"Then—Barbara Ann wrinkled up her nose—"I'd have you arrested for speeding, officer, we've really been here only ten minutes at the most."

"Say!" exploded the officer. "Where do you think you are? Come along and talk to the judge!"

"But, officer," Barbara Ann smiled, "really, you know, I've got to get home; dad's waiting dinner for me."

"Aw—officer, have a heart, I have to get home, too; my mother's waiting dinner for me!"

The officer turned from one to the other. "Say—are you two together in this? Do you know each other?"

"Know—him?"

"Know—her?"

The officer laughed uproariously. "Go along, you two; I wouldn't dare put you in jail. You'd break up the place and I would lose my job."

Russ got to his car first, stepped on the starter, and set the car in motion. He waved his cap in the air as he passed her. "See you in church!"

"Not if I see you first, you won't!"

Barbara Ann turned over the motor slipped the car into gear just as the green light turned into red. She set her brakes again. "Confound it, it's the woman that gets the bad breaks all the time. Isn't it true, Pris?" she muttered sympathetically.

A few hours later she was in her room dressing for dinner. There was a knock on the door, and her father asked if he might step in and have a chat with her.

She ran up to him and threw her arms around him. "Any time you want, Frankie. You're the most adorable man. And I'm certainly proud to have you all by myself."

"That's what I wanted to see you about, Babs. We're having company for dinner—the people next door. You know I wrote you about that charming lady who moved in after you left for school? Well, her son just came home today and we're having a little celebration—the four of us. You do not mind?"

Her lips drooped momentarily and then she laughed and answered: "Of course not. What are they like?"

"Well—Diane—she coughed a little, "Mrs. Hayes is really a wonderful woman; I know you'll like her on the spot. Her son I don't know; I've never seen him; but from what she says he must be a fine chap. I'm hoping you'll like him. We'll be seeing a lot of each other, you know—just next door."

Barbara Ann laughed enjoyably. "Not a love, are you Frankie?"

Her father was a big man but there was no age to him at all. There was a little gray at his temples, but not a wrinkle in his sunburned face. He adored Barbara Ann, had raised her from a tiny child, into this lovely smiling person. But he had been lonely. And Barbara Ann was of age now; soon she would be fulfilling in love, marrying, and having a home of her own. It was for that era in his life that Franklin Reynolds believed in preparing. But it was no time to tell her now. There were so many things to talk about. It had been a whole year since he had seen her at all.

He slipped his arm about her. "I'm in love with you, Babs!"

She tweaked his nose playfully. "We do get along together, don't we? And it's so nice getting along with a man especially when he's your father! There, see what I've got for you!" and laid out along her bed were the twelve little packages. She ran over to them, began at the top and counted down, "January, February, March," and so on, down to "December."

She sat on the stool at the foot of the bed, hugging her knees as he went rapturously from one to the other. There were a pair of gloves for January, June brought him an outlandish pair of silk shorts—he was amazed, but he told her they were simply scrumptious. December got him a pair of white woolen socks and a white woolen scarf.

He reached for the phone as soon as the bag bundle was opened, and Barbara Ann gave him a strewed look when he began talking.

"Diane, this is Franklin—you should see all the things my little girl has brought home. He chuckled and there was a long silence.

Barbara Ann watched her father's eyes sparkle, saw the pleasant smile on his face. The tone of his voice was a dead give-away. "He is in love with her," she told herself. "It's marvelous for dad—I only hope she's good enough for him."

He put up the receiver. "Diane says that they're dying to come." Barbara Ann laughed teasingly. "Run along and get yourself spruced up, dad. I think I'll change into something different, since we're celebrating."

She took time enough to ruffle up Priscilla's hair and take the dust out of the cat's eyes. "Come along, Pris—you're meeting new company tonight and you must look your best."

They went down the long stairway together just as her father opened the door to welcome Diane Hayes and her son. She heard the young man say to her father: "You don't mind if I bring the dog, do you? Our house is strange to him—he'd be miserable over there alone."

She heard her father laugh heartily, heard the welcoming slap of his hand upon the young man's back and her heart sank to the bottom of her shoes when she finally realized what it was. It was too late to capture Priscilla; she had scampered on down the stairs.

"Grr-woof-art!" And Jevons was off again.

"Past! Past!" Around the house they flew Priscilla dodging behind the long portieres which separated the dining room from the sun porch, Jevons trying his level best to stand upon the highly polished floor.

Finally Barbara Ann and Russ rescued them. Jevons frantically waved his snow white stump of a tail, but poor Priscilla lay like a terrified child in Barbara Ann's consoling arms. "So!" She looked into Russ's face, which sent a tremor of premonition through him. "So—you're Diane Hayes handsome son!"

"You're!"—he was so dumfounded and dismayed he could hardly talk. "You're Franklin Reynolds charming daughter!"

"If I'd known that!" they both said spontaneously, and Russ walked away with Jevons squirming in his arms.

Mrs. Hayes and Barbara Ann's father came into the sun porch and caught their final words. Mrs. Reynolds smiled and looked pleased. "So you two know each other, do you?"

Barbara Ann gasped and Russ tried to stare out the charming smile on his mother's face. "Know—her! Oh my heavens!" he groaned.

Barbara Ann flared. "I should say we don't know each other! Why, I never saw him until this afternoon when—when his old dog tried to kill Priscilla! I was wishing I'd never see him again!"

Mr. Reynolds and Mrs. Hayes drew apart from one another, stunned and amazed. "Why, Barbara Ann?"

"Why, Russell!"

Barbara Ann gave a pathetic little smile. "I'm sorry dad, excuse it, please I think I'll go upstairs and take Priscilla with me. You can judge for your self how well she and Jevons get along."

Russ still held the guilty Jevons in his arms. "Don't bother to do that, Miss Reynolds," he suggested, with something of a martyrdom in his tone. "Jevons and I'll just run along home."

"Oh no, I couldn't have you doing that, really. Pris and I'll go to my room!"

Mrs. Hayes laughed delicately. "Why you two people are acting like perfect children. I've a scheme. You take Jevons home, Russ and Barbara Ann, if she will, can put Priscilla up in her room. Hurry back—that's much better. We'll get the two enemies out of sight."

Of course, there was no sense of spoiling her father's evening, especially when he had counted on making it so pleasant, so Barbara Ann consented.

GUTTA PERCHA TIRES

GUM CUSHIONED

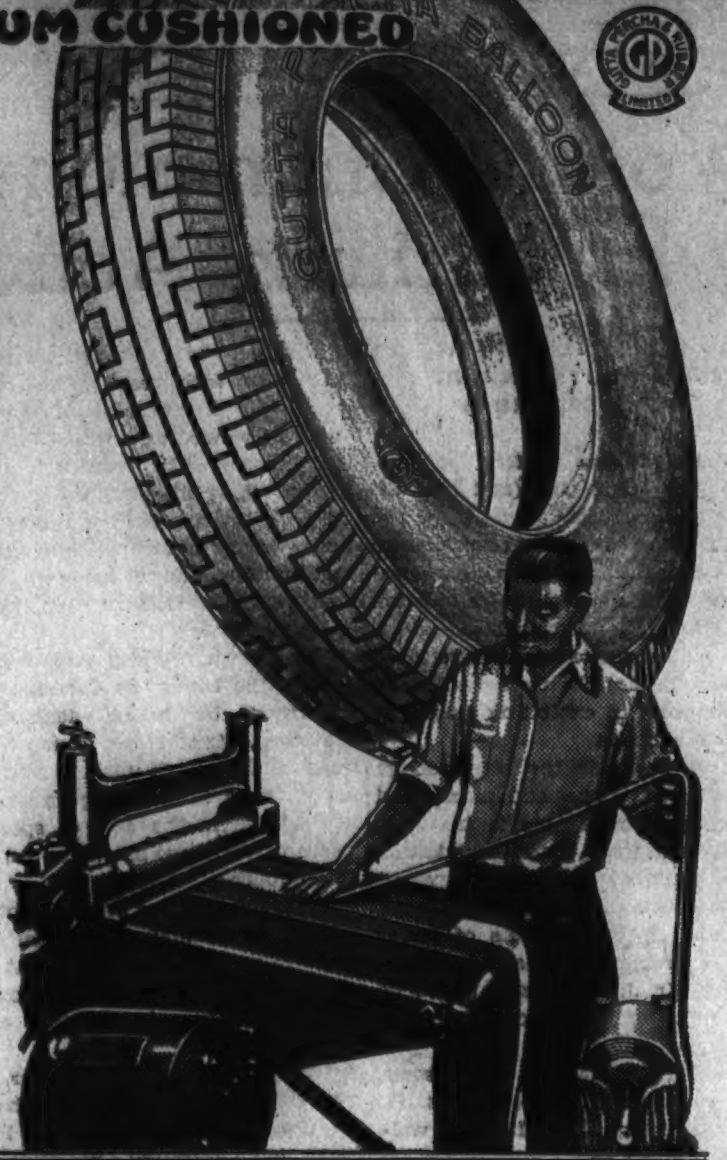

Why 'GP' Tires are shockproof

Examine the illustration above and you will see that the vital parts of Gutta Percha Tires are effectively protected by cushions of live rubber. The location of these Gum Cushions is exactly where undue strains are encountered. This invaluable protective feature is exclusive to "GP" Tires—an added safeguard to uninterrupted service. The constant shocks and strains thrust upon tires are absorbed by the cushions, saving the cords from injury. The longer life of Gutta Percha Tires is definitely due to these marvellous, protective Gum Cushions.

cap upon his head with a smart little twist. Put that one down for him. Strike one.

It was the sudden rising of the hair along Priscilla's back that forewarned Barbara Ann the next morning that Russ and Jevons were on their way over for tennis. She scooped Priscilla into her arms and ran back into the house. "It appears that you and Jevons are going to beat us at our own little game. Jevons shows his teeth and you bare your claws!"

Barbara Ann donned her oldest skirt and had rummaged around until she discovered an old middie blouse she had worn during her first-year private-school days. She had tied a flash of red silk ribbon across her bronze waves, and allowed her half socks to wrinkle unbecomingly upon oxfords which were badly in need of repair. Her face was as plain as an unperfected canvas.

Jevons, it appeared, was the gay spectacle. He was freshly washed and buoyant. And he liked color! He made one mad dash, nipping Barbara Ann's socks, fugging up at her, begging her in his best canine fashion to play with him. She lifted her hand high in the air, gave one swing, and sent him scampering through the hedge again after a red tennis ball.

Brown eyes, which were here, met points of fine steel, and the battle was on. "Stunning!" he said sarcastically, glancing at her critically.

"Thought you'd like it—wanted you to keep your mind on the game."

"Hold yourself, don't you?"

"No—not myself! But you're rather a sight for sore eyes, too!"

It was hard not to smile just then for Russ had on a pair of white duck trousers which looked as though he had purposely reiled them into a tightwad and then jumped upon them. His sweat shirt appeared to have been better days on the cinder track at college, and his black hair which could be rather striking in a beetle-back sort of way, seemed to have seen neither comb or brush.

"Well," he said, "people who dislike one another never take the trouble to make good impressions."

She laughed. "It would take you a lot of trouble, too!"

The games they played were hard and fast ones, and when they walked out to the house for luncheon their parents seemed astounded at their appearance. Diane said: "You must have played in the dust—by the looks of you."

Barbara Ann's father seemed interested.

"It must have been a pretty close score. Who won?"

"Even!" They ground out simultaneously, and then covered their mutual dislike with sparring laughter.

It was at luncheon that Diane Hayes said: "You two youngsters ought to go into business together. Really, you stimulate one another so."

"Business?" Barbara Ann's father said. "But why business together?"

Barbara Ann flushed not in embarrassment but in dismayed anger. Heavens! Their parents did not expect them to fall in love and marry, did they? She smiled awkwardly and then turned astonishedly adoring eyes upon Russ. "You're too utterly perfect. Yes, I do believe you're even beautiful. I'd like to take you in business with me because I think you're a splendid stimulant—like a headache powder, you know. You'd run up your good points until you were effervescent, and before I knew it you'd have me buying aspirin once in a while. But, on second thought—she grew once more serious—you'd be bad for me. I'd either be with or without a headache! And I'm afraid I'd get fed up on headache powder too quickly!"

"You might," said Russ, meeting her insolence and the little game of mean ness they were playing with a wide grin, "try a soda as a counterstimulant!"

Their parents gasped. "What in the world are you two talking about?"

Diane Hayes managed between ripples of laughter.

Franklin seemed puzzled. "Is this what I'm supposed to expect from our overly modern children, Diane?"

If I'd talked such nonsense I'm sure my father would have asked me to leave the table. He wasn't angry; he was just too much in love with Diane to see that these two youngsters were sticking out their tongues at each other in the pretense of a smile.

"I just don't want Mrs. Hayes to be hurt when I go into business and don't take Russ with me," Barbara Ann remarked.

Her father laughed. "Oh, is that all my dear?" he turned his attention to Mrs. Hayes—"would you care for some more tea?"

"Really," Barbara Ann demanded their attention once again—"I'm going into business tomorrow!"

"What?" Her father looked up in astonishment, spilling some tea on the tablecloth.

Russ leaned back in his chair, took a cigarette, lighted it, and looked at her, more interested than amused. He really began to look at her for the first time, only he blew smoke into a sort of camouflage. Certainly he never wanted her to discover that he thought she was a spunky little thing that he thought her, pretty and surprising.

Her father completed his apologies for spilling the tea, and then said: "You're not going into business Barbara Ann? He laughed. 'What do you know about business?'"

"Enough to make some money in it," she retorted. Going into business was a good idea, though, she had to admit to herself. She had been wondering how in the world she could get rid of Russ without actually bewitching her father. He was the most precious thing in the world to Barbara Ann. She couldn't bear to see a frown cross his forehead, or unbalance his life in a tight line.

The minute Mrs. Hayes had said something about business, Barbara Ann had found a way.

And right now she was racking her brain to find out just what kind of a business she could go into! Suddenly she brightened and smiled. "I'm planning a miniature golf course that will be a knock-out. I'm thinking of making it rather intricate—lots of hazards, you know—and I'm going to charge twenty-five cents admission and I think—"

She perked her head to one side, looking like an adorable little busy-body. Her hair taking delight freedom from the tight red ribbon around it, now curled up into provocative commas all about her forehead; her brown eyes sparkled with the light that comes only to great inventors.

"I think," she looked right through that blue smoke screen of Russ's into his vulnerable eyes—"I'll have a banner painted and hung above the entrance to the links: 'A Dog's Life.' Nineteen holes to bury the bone of contention!"

"You might even add," said Russ, warming up to the idea: "Every dog has his day!"

"Splendid!" Mrs. Hayes clapped her hands. "You'll make oodles of money Barbara Ann. And the crowds will come. I'll cut up everybody I know and Franklin will do the same. You could even go as far as to have signs painted: 'Bark your ears here!'"

Franklin made a grimace. "Not so good, that one, Diane. It'd be a fine thing though, Barbara Ann, for those poor creatures who go to sneak away from home with their tails between their legs."

Barbara Ann got to her feet instantly. "You're all making fun of me. You don't really know how serious I am. Well, wait until tomorrow—you'll see!"

"And you're sure you won't need a stimulant, Barbara Ann?" Russ queried.

"No!" she snapped. "If you want to play you'll have to play on a course of your own."

"I was thinking of that," he said quietly. "It would be interesting to see who would make the most money I was thinking I'd call my course 'Puss in Boots.' You know—a purr of satisfaction with every putt."

She laughed. "You might get catcalls from my customers, too!"

"That's all right!" He was on his feet at the front door, calling for Jevons before those at the table quite realized what he was doing. "Here Jevons, I've got a use for you. He caught him in his arms and promptly brought him to Barbara Ann. "I'll lend you Jevons if you'll lend me Priscilla."

"But I don't like dogs—and you don't like cats—"

"In business," he said tersely, "you have got to make a show of liking everything and everybody."

"But what has Jevons got to do with my business?"

"Oh," he groaned, "don't you see—supersuperman! Jevons, the indispensable, hopping around, wagging his tale, advertising the fact that dogs do have fun at that!"

"Not bad," she said. "Priscilla?"

"She'd make a smart cashier for me, my puss in boots! Do you see? I know I could get her trained and well-mannered in a jiffy."

Barbara Ann promptly handed him back the wriggling Jevons. "Priscilla have you know, is trained and well-mannered as I is. You'd make a mess of her!"

"Well, not saying what you might do to Jevons!"

"Oh!" exclaimed Mrs. Hayes with a little cry, the minute you bring that dog and cat into the conversation you start a fight. Forget all that nonsense about a golf business and go out and enjoy yourself!"

Barbara Ann and Russ right then and there mutely conceded that Jevons and Priscilla would make desirable advertisements in the very near future. Barbara Ann walked out of the room with Russ, and he told her earnestly: "There comes a time in every big business man's life when he is compelled to concede that his competitor is a brilliant person. I've got to concede that right now. It was perfectly ingenious the way you managed to get rid of me! And it affords perfect excuses for me to keep out of your way. I am deeply indebted."

Of course he was joking. Ever since he had donned that atrocious-looking tennis suit that morning he had been joking and enjoying it, but Barbara Ann and her insistence that they remain enemies rather intrigued him. Of course, they were young—young enough to get more of a thrill out of a thing like a feud than out of trying to act worldly wise and high-brow. So he decided to battle on with her and wait and see just when she'd throw in the white flag.

The next morning Barbara Ann and Russ had rented vacant lots adjoining each other. Two weeks later the carpenters had completed building the most outlandish hazards, laying the strips of cork for the fairway putting up the signs. And late the following afternoon both courses were jamming with people. Friends of her father's and friends of his mother's were on his and her courses. And at the end of the day, Jevons managed to escape back to his old fort, and Priscilla was sent scurrying home through the bushes.

Barbara Ann had closed the place and was sitting on the grass counting the day's receipts. Russ came to the fence, peered over, and said: "How much did you make?"

"She pushed back her hair from her forehead and smiled triumphantly. "More than you did, I bet!"

"Well, how much?" he insisted. "I'm not through counting yet."

"Well, hurry up! I counted the cash and the people. I bet I have more money than you have—I had more people."

"You didn't! My place was crowded. 'H-o-m-e! Well, count!'"

"Twenty-seven fifty," she said at last, raising her head.

"What?" He jumped over the hedge and sat on the grass beside her. "Here, let me count it—you must have made a mistake." He counted out: "One, two,—well, of all things! He tossed the money into her lap, got up rather savagely and started for home. "How much did you make?" she asked with slurring sweetness.

He turned back and muttered: "Even!"

"She couldn't believe him: 'No!'"

"Yes! We're even on tennis and even now!" he scoffed.

"That's too bad, isn't it? You can't quite beat me. And it hurts, doesn't it?" She was laughing. She got up and put the money in her pocket. "Some day you'll have to tell me I'm the winner in this little game of ours. Some day you'll have to eat—dirt!"

"Well," he sputtered, his face an unbecoming red. "I'll get even yet!"

Then Barbara Ann laughed recklessly, foolishly. "You are even! You lost and yet—er!"

He gave her a black look, and she laughed.

But the next day things didn't go so well with Barbara Ann. Only a few people came to play on her course, and she realized for the first time how cruel and ruthless competitive business can be. She blamed it at first on Jevons, she told you to play dead today, I bet!"

But curiosity got the better of her and toward the close of the day she went cautiously around to see what the added attraction could possibly be. A reduction in price! She might know it. There was a sign:

PUSS IN BOOTS NOW TWENTY-CENTS. WAS TWENTY-FIVE.

YOU GET A LOT MORE FOR YOUR MONEY

Barbara Ann sent Jevons home and left the door open for the rapid advent of Priscilla.

But that night she took her signs down, went noiselessly into the basement, took the black paint, made a diagonal line upon the twenty-five cents and wrote below:

A DOGS LIFE. ONCE TWENTY-FIVE CENTS. NOW FIFTEEN. IT'S CHEAPER TO PLAY HERE.

NOTHING'S BEEN CHANGED BUT THE PRICE!

And so the pendulum swung back and forth, first fifteen then ten—now both were advertising their game for the nominal fee of five cents! Russ added the sign:

TOSS A BUFFALO TO PUSS IN BOOTS AND ENJOY THE GAME

Barbara Ann made a flourish with what this country needs is A GOOD FIVE CENT GOLF COURSE. PUTT IT HERE!

But right in the midst of their little flurry to keep from being even all the time, Diane and Franklin announced that they were going to be married. They had decided upon a garden wedding, and Russ and Barbara Ann would have to close their golf courses for a couple of days and help.

And once again the old clothes were donned, and Barbara Ann and Russ assisted the gardener in raking the leaves and arranging the tables and chairs. They made an altar of the clipped archway in the garden, putting in roses and begonia blooms for scratch on his nose. Priscilla scampered before him, her fur quivering down as she walked victoriously into the house.

Russ scooped Jevon's up under his arm. "That'll teach you not to become too friendly with the neighbors, old boy. Come on; we must be off. Get to bed up for the wedding!" He offered Barbara Ann his hand and lifted her to her feet. "See you in church!"

She made a wry smile. "But not at the altar, old thing!"

It was a beautiful wedding. Russ had never seen his mother look so lovely. Barbara Ann had never known her father to be so dear. They walked down the garden path like a pair.

WAINWRIGHT, ALBERTA AUGUST 19th, 1931

THEN
AND NOWA year ago, when wheat touched 92½, the opinion was freely expressed that it had "reached bottom" and a high official of the United States department of agriculture predicted that the turn was imminent.What is bottom? Now that No. 3 is down to about 33c or 34c at initial shipping points, ideas of what may be the real "bottom" as represented by the actual cost of production are being constantly revised.Three year old figures of the cost of production on an acre of wheat in this country are so far out of date, that one representative farmer stated to the News yesterday, that "any man who has a cost of $12 or $13 and acre
simply shouldn't be raising wheat."
Five dollars an acre, with a variation of 25c or 30c either way, are estimates made by reliable grain growers as to the cost of production
here in 1931. If the farmers who keep tab on costs keep shifting the "bottom" as they have done in the past two years, wheat prices are going to have a hard time reaching it,
and the Alberta grain grower is going to continue in business after his competitors elsewhere have been forced out of the game.Whatever the yield may be this season, this district has a strand of straw that is thick enough for a forty bushel output, and the threshing returns are confidently expected to show a return that will be far above
the ten year provincial average of about twenty bushels.Against this, midway in the various estimates, are the figures of one prominent farmer, who estimates that his crop this year is costing him $5.05
per acre, on the following basis:
Seed 30c, sowing 25c, plowing and preparation $2.00, combining 50c, depreciation on machinery 50c, taxes 30c, and interest on land $1.20. Thirty bushels of No. 2 wheat at 17c a bushel would pay expenses, he shows;
and as the present apogee for a price
is about double that figure, he considered he still has a margin of profit.These are trying times, all right,
but it is encouraging to find that no matter what happens Alberta has farmers who are able to meet conditions
with a determination to come out on top, anyway.—Provoost News.SUMMER TIME
—FLY TIME!No one is physically afraid of a fly because it can do no actual hurt of itself. It has, however, many bad habits which make it a dangerous insect to the human race.When a fly eats, it steps into the food and not only eats all it wishes
but covers legs, body and wings. In this way it may collect a few typhoid germs from a yard-toilet or tubercle bacilli from an open cuspidor.It then next alights on some article
of food such as the milk picher, fruit
or vegetables, bread or cake, or the baby's bottle. After that it is only a short time till some individual, old or young, is infected.Once the fly enters the home, it is impossible to provide protection from the germs which may enter with the insect. It is necessary, therefore, to take such measures as will not only keep the flies outside but reduce their number in the neighborhood to a minimum.The prevention of a fly breeding
may be assured by the elimination of its breeding places. This requires the proper care of stable manure and the removal or disinfection of other
decomposing refuse such as garbage,
wet papers and rubbish of all sorts.
The treatment of manure and other refuse with chemical disinfectants for the prevention of fly breeding is a development of recent years and progress has been rapid. Flies love
the garbage pail, so this receptacle
should be kept tightly covered.Flies breed in almost any rotting or fermenting matter. They breed in any kind of dung, whether from horses, cows, pigs or human beings. Decaying grains, rotting fruits or vegetables, waste cotton or woolen garments, sacking and paper — all furnish admirable breeding places when the materials are moist and warm and especially when mixed with acids or earth.WHY NOT LIVE
TO 100 YEARS?Some interesting facts are brought out through the personal of the Eighth Annual Report of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Ottawa. One of particular interest is the fact that in 1928
there were 79 deaths of reputed Cen-turiarians, 35 of whom were males and 44 females. The ages as given in death certificates ranged from 100
to 108 years.Each province of Canada was represented in this list, Ontario having 28 and Manitoba and Alberta two each, the others being distributed between these figures.That living for a century or over
is not so uncommon as may be supposed is evidenced by the following recent years in Canada.1921—72 deaths.
1922—63 deaths.
1923—65 deaths.
1924—39 deaths, (22 males, 17 females, from 100 to 113 years.) 1926—91 deaths, (34 males, 57 females, from 100 to 116 years.) 1927—80 deaths, (34 males, 46 females, from 100 to 113 years.)GOVERNMENT SCHOOLS
WILL NOT OPERATEACCOMMODATION BEING MADE
FOR STUDENTS AT OLDS
AND VERMILIONEDMONTON.—As an economy measure in view of prevailing conditions
this year, two of the Alberta provincial schools, at Claresholm and Raymond, will not be operated this fall
and winter.Students who would be attending
these schools in the ordinary course will be accommodated at the remaining schools, at Olds and Vermilion,
and the government will absorb any extra expense involved by them in transportation.Hon. George Hoadley, minister of agriculture, under whose direction
this branch of the government's activities is carried on, makes it clear that the closing of the two schools
is not intended as a permanent plan
but is a temporary expedient to meet the immediate situation.A saving of $67,000 a year will be made by the government through not operating the Claresholm and Raymond schools, even after an allowance for paying extra travelling expenses. Incidentally the financial position of the Olds and Vermilion
schools, both of which have dormitory buildings in connection, will be improved.In explanation of the decision to close the two schools, it is pointed out that both have been declining in students attendance for several years, Claresholm having dropped from 75
to 39, and Raymond from 97 to 60 in the past five years. Further declines in the existing circumstances, were expected this coming fall, and the government therefore decided not to re-open.Fully adequate facilities for taking care of the increased registration
are available, it is stated, at both Olds and Vermilion. Provision will be made, it is also understood, for absorbing a considerable portion of the administrative and teaching staffs of the two schools thus being closed out.

SKIRTS AS

BUSINESS BAROMETER

The theory that business activities improve and stock market prices go up when skirt lengths shorten and that depression sets in as hemlines
creep may sound crazy and ah, that,
but not so according to Elton Johnson, writing in a recent issue of Toronto, "Star Weekly". As Mr.
Johnson says, there is no getting away from the facts, and he has plenty of them too, all the way from charts and photographs and quotations from leading fashion magazines
to experiences on the stock market.
Here, in a nutshell, is Mr. Johnson's story: Back in 1920-21 business was down. Skirt lengths were down too, away down to the ankles. Prosperity returned in 1924 and 1925 and hem-lines moved up a bit. As businesscontinued to improve, skirts grew shorter and shorter. Both stock market prices and skirts reached their "high" in the summer of 1928. Shortly after this, skirt lengths began to drop and with them came market prices. Both reached "bottom" in the winter of 1930. Mr. Johnson thinks better times are in store for us and points to the fact that skirts are being worn just a trifle shorter. If this skirt length business has anything to do with it, then we're all for the short variety—the shorter the better. Who wouldn't be under the circumstances?

EVERYONE WAS HAPPY

A Short Editorial
by

Richard S. Bond

Not so long ago a pair of lanky
young men installed an electric refrigerator in my kitchen.One of them rather thoughtfully placed one of his tools on a piece of glass which happened to be on a window ledge. The tool was the harder so the glass cracked. So far as the workmen know he was unobserved,
so he smiled broadly and failed to mention the damage.I smiled too. The day was warm and I had intended to slip a half dollar
to those particular workmen. If one could smile because he had possibly saved the price of a ten cent piece of glass, surely I could smile at the savings of half a dollar. Both of us were very happy over the incident,
although only one of us realized that old man opportunity with a fifty cent
piece had been knocking at the door of the other. Funny old world, isn't it?A FREE RADIO COLLEGE OF HEALTHThe Canadian Social Hygiene Council's Free Radio College of Health has just concluded its third annual term. It is the only college of the other—unique also because it has no
bursar, buildings nor books, no fees,
degrees or examinations and only
one subject—health.This term, thousands of Canadians on farms, in villages, towns and cities from coast to coast have heard
the voices of lecturers telling them
how to prevent diphtheria, typhoid fever, how to beware the early signs
of cancer and how to seek health
through nature's greatest medicine—
sunlight.Thirty lectures in all have been given and the entire course has been provided free by the Canadian Social Hygiene Council. The result has been a "college" with an unprecedented
low running cost, its only endowment good-will, the lecture-halls the homes of the Canadian public. The scores of daily and weekly news papers have given free time and free space to the lectures and these were
as free as the ether that carried its messages. Sixteen radio stations and response of this vast, invisible class
is attested by letters from every corner of Canada. Lectures were delivered in French and English.The importance of pure milk, the saving of child life through proper care and feedings, mental hygiene prevention and cure of tuberculosis, the need for regular physical examinations, these and other subjects close to the life of the average Canadian,
were dealt with.DID YOU EVER

5 REASONS
WHY
Alberta POOL Elevators
are worthy of support

- 1 The greater the volume handled by Pool elevators the less the cost of handling per bushel.
- 2 Pool elevators are not operated for profit. They are operated to give the farmers the best possible service.
- 3 Pool elevators assure patrons safety on grades and weights. Close adherence to a strict policy of fair treatment of patrons in respect to grades, weights and dockage is insisted upon by the management, acting under instructions from the delegates.
- 4 The history of grain handling and selling since the time when the prairies were first farmed, up to the present, clearly shows the real importance to producers of maintaining an efficient and complete elevator system under their control. This gives producers a power and influence which they otherwise would not have, were they dependent only on facilities owned and operated on a profit-making basis.
- 5 The uneven crop in Alberta, with indications of a reduced aggregate yield from former years only increases the urgent need of seeing that the support of pool elevators, so enthusiastically given in past years, is maintained during the coming crop year to an even greater extent.

WHEAT SHIPMENT

MONTREAL.—Two tramp steamers
will load approximately half a million bushels of heavy grain, probably wheat, at Churchill, Man., between September 15 and 25, 1931. Arrange-who carried out negotiations.The steamers Warkworth, Wentworth and Parnsworth, owned by the

Siam's Visit to Canada

The beautiful Wat Po temple, at Bangkok, capital of Siam, shows a splendid example of the country's architecture. Inset: Their Majesties King Prajadhipok and Queen Rambai Barni, landing from the Canadian Government steamer "Lady Grey", at Montreal, where they were accorded an enthusiastic welcome.Canada's most illustrious guests
for the present week are undoubtedly Their Majesties
the King and Queen of Siam, who,
with a party of relatives, officials
and servants from their own land,
are at present making their way
across this country and missing
few if any of the sights that should be seen by the intelligent tourist in our midst.His Majesty King Prajadhipok, pronounced Pra-cha-ti-pok, with
the accent on the second syllable,
is the descendant of Buddha, and
holder of half a dozen stirring Oriental titles, and furthermore,
the unquestioned master of the destinies of ten million people.
Naturally, then, one looks toward seeing him with keen interest, and all unprepared for the shock when a well-groomed gentleman steps from his train and with smiling courtesy and in English speech quite undistinguish-
able from that spoken by cultured Canadians greets those who await
him. Later we understand it. An Oxford education and a term or two at a French military school
as well as visits of study to the United States and other occidental countries have had their effect upon a naturally active mind of an outstandingly intelligent nature.Siam is fortunate in her King.
Under his enlightened guidance
she is moving slowly out of Oriental mediocrity into such modernism as is good for the country's welfare and happiness,
not by revolution or the sudden
casting away of long-tried things that have proved their use, but by the gradual assimilation of the things that are good and modern among the nations.You see it in his every move, in his grave,
thoughtful air, and in the serious
respectful manner in which the members of his suite approach
him. More than all it is seen in what he has done for Siam. Of his Queen, Rambai Barni, columns might be written. Her charm of manner and captivating smile
have captured all who have met
her ever since the first set foot on Canadian soil at Quebec. As modern as her husband, and speaking as excellent English, as indeed do all sixteen members of her suite, Her Majesty seems to enjoy every moment of her stay in Canada.It is astonishing how interested
the party are in Canadian history,
and historic scenes. When at Quebec the battlefields of the Plains of Abraham were gone over
most carefully and every interesting relic in and about the city
was duly visited. The party occupied a complete upper floor in the tower of the Chateau Fronte-
nac from where they had a view of the whole theatre of the struggle that ended in the fall of the French regime. His Majesty did not come to Canada as a stranger.He was here six years ago on his way to Europe and he already knew something of our history.
In that fact lies the explanation
of the exceedingly interesting
statement he issued to the people of Canada upon his arrival at Quebec. It was as follows:"In landing upon this continent in British Columbia last April I expressed the hope that I might have an opportunity of seeing more of this great and growing member of the British Commonwealth of Nations. That hope is about to be realized. We shall remain for a time here in "Old Canada" where the sturdy characteristics of French and British forbears have blended
in a culture as admirable as it is unique. After meeting officials of the Government, and visiting the Capital of the Dominion, we shall travel west
through Canada, remaining for a time in the Canadian Rockies
before embarking at Vancouver.
I look forward to the opportunity of seeing at closer range the people and the institutions of this nation whose vigor and progressiveness are so happily
apparent."

LADY HOMESTEADERS BREAK ALL RECORDS

ALBERTA ONLY PROVINCE NOW
HOMESTEADING LANDS; POL-ICY NEARING ACTION

EDMONTON—Homestead entries in Alberta for the month of July numbered 1,114, more than half of which were taken through the Edmonton and office. Of the total for the month, 531 entries were made by women, this being the first month in which the new law enabling women to homestead was in operation.

Included also in the total were 147 second homesteads, 51 of the latter being in the Edmonton district. In first homestead entries the figures by land district offices were as follows: Edmonton, 545; Peace River, 236; Grande Prairie, 142; Calgary, 23; Lethbridge, 10.

A fairly large proportion of the second homestead entries were made by settlers moving out from the drought areas of Southern Alberta, and re-locating in the north, and it is expected that the August figures will show a still heavier percentage from this source.

Alberta is now the only province in Canada that is homesteading lands and the July report indicates that the new administration policy is getting into full action. The feature of the month was the business done by women, who gave every appearance of appreciating and responding to their new privilege of equal terms with men. The 331 women's entries were divided about half and half between single and married women, most of the former being the daughters of farmers already holding homesteads in their own names.

THE PERFECT FOOD— A DANGEROUS SLAYER

How contradictory the above statement seems and yet how perfectly true. Milk has been known for years as the main article of diet for babies, young children and even up to adult life. It contains substances which produce strong bone and good muscle and provides nourishment in the best form for the growing child. This statement is true of pure safe milk and all authorities are agreed that milk in this form should be a large part of the diet of the average healthy child. Why then is it called a dangerous slayer? The answer is very simple. It is well known that many diseases are introduced into the human body through germs. Many of the most malignant and dangerous of these live and breed very comfortably in milk. Some of these diseases are diphtheria, scarlet fever, tuberculosis, typhoid fever, dysentery, septic sore throat and many others.

The question is often asked how can even the most intelligent people let the difference between pure and impure milk—between milk which is a perfect food and milk which brings disease and death in its train? No one but a skilled chemist can be absolutely sure of this for our senses of sight, smell and taste are incapable of detecting the difference. Impure milk may come from the most scrupulously clean dairy and we are therefore faced with the fact that the only defence against the disease germs lurking in milk is pasteurization.

Briefly, pasteurization means to heat the milk to 145 degrees Fahrenheit keep it at this temperature for thirty minutes rapidly cool it to forty or fifty degrees Fahrenheit and keep it cool until consumed. This process effectively destroys the disease germs without materially altering the quality or flavour of the milk. Any vitamin deficiency so caused is easily replaced by the use of orange or tomato juice.

A few facts as to what has happened in one province of Canada—Ontario—through the use of unpasteurized milk are herewith appended. In 1928 the town of Dundas with a population of 6,137 had an epidemic of typhoid with thirteen cases due to people drinking raw milk from a dairy which employed a typhoid carrier and which did not pasteurize its milk.

In 1927 Chatham with a population of 16,441 had 109 cases of typhoid fever. This was due to milk which was delivered to consumers, containing the typhoid germ. In 1930 the town of Belleville also suffered from an epidemic of typhoid, due to raw milk being consumed instead of pasteurized milk. In 1930 the town of Kirkland Lake had 497 cases and four deaths from septic sore throat all of which was directly attributed to the use of raw milk containing these germs. Had the milk been pasteurized the town would have been saved from this epidemic of disease and death.

In contrast to this we have cities like Toronto in which not one case of typhoid is attributed to milk nor are there any other milk-borne diseases because all milk sold in Toronto is efficiently pasteurized. Many communities are enforcing the pasteurization bylaw throughout their City Councils and they are to be commended for this work along the lines of preventive medicine. They are not only saving their communities from the ravages of disease but are actually improving the economic conditions of the milk dealers themselves. Pasteurization is the only method available for making your milk safe. In addition it enables milk to be transported greater distances and kept longer and this adds in dollars and cents to the value of the milk produced.

EIGHTH FORTNIGHTLY CROP REPORT

Issued by the Department of Agriculture, Province of Alberta, Edmonton, August, 8th, 1931

Rains have occurred in the north, north central and extreme southern part of Alberta during the past week. From Calgary to Macleod and in the east central part of the province dry weather continues and crops are suffering severely. In the north central area rains were very heavy, totalling three inches of precipitation at some points. This excessive moisture has caused considerable lodging of grain and will tend to delay ripening. Extensive hail damage was reported at a number of points and freezing temperatures were reached at a few points in the Peace River District.

Cutting of wheat is in progress in the southern part of the province, and barley cutting has commenced. It favored with dry weather, cutting will be general throughout the province within the next ten or twelve days.

No damage from insect or plant disease is reported.

Hay has been at a standstill in a large part of the province during the past fortnight owing to the continued wet weather, and fields of sweet clover and other kinds of hay have deteriorated in quality. A period of dry, warm weather is urgently needed, both for haying and hastening maturity of grain crops.

Pastures outside of the dry area are in excellent condition.

Potatoes and other special crops give promise of satisfactory yields.

THE EXAMINER'S WEEKLY REVIEW OF PROV. MARKETS

CATTLE

BEEF—On the Edmonton market receipts have been heavier, with prices showing little change as compared with last week. Choice heavy steers brought from $4.50 to $4.75; choice light $5 to $5.25; good $4.75 to $5; medium $4 to $4.25, and common $2.50 to $3.50. The choice heifers sold at $4.75 to $5, with good kinds at $4.50 to $4.75. Choice cows went at $2.75 to $3; good $2.50 to $2.75; medium $2 to $2.50, common $1.50 to $2 and canners and cutters $1 to $1.50. Choice bulls sold at $1.75 to $2, while the mediums made $1.50 to $1.75 and canners from $1 up. Choice light calves went over the scales at $5.50 to $6 and common brought $3.50 to $4.50. FEEDERS-STOCKERS—the demand in this division has been moderately active during the past week, with feeder steers at $3 to $3.75; stock steers $3 to $3.75, stock heifers $3 to $3.75 and stock cows $2 to $2.50.

At Edmonton quotations showed a loss as compared with last week's prices. Loring figures showed hogs at $5.50 to $5.75; select $6 to $6.25 and butchers $5 to $5.25, fed and weaners.

SHEEP

On the Edmonton market prices held about steady with lambs at $5.50 to $6; yearlings from $3.50 to $4, and ewes $2 to $3.

GRAIN

Sentiment has been mixed on the market at Winnipeg during the week and the trend has been erratic, being up one day and down the next. Closing figures for the week are, however, slightly higher. Cutting has started in some sections of the province, but no reports on yields are available, yet. Some hail damage has occurred, while a few crops have been plowed in.

CREAM—BUTTER—MILK
CREAM—Prices holding steady, with special at 16c; first 14c; second 11c, at country points and central areas. Receipts showing gradual decline in quality on the whole good, although "stink-wood" and hot weather making their presence known. CREAMERY BUTTER—Good sales, both in province and at outside points. Considerable financial conditions. Make fairly heavy; prices steady despite easier feeling: No. 1 cartons, 24c; No. 2, 22c; No. 1 prints, 23c; No. 2, 21c. DAIRY BUTTER—Good demand for fancy table offerings, but other grades very hard to turn over. Considerable low grade butter being offered. Prices unchanged, with fancy table at 15c; No. 1, 14c; No. 2, 12c. MILK—Price unchanged at $1.90 per 100 lbs. Terms 3.3

POULTRY—EGGS

POULTRY—Fairly heavy supply of broilers being offered and good ones are finding ready outlet, but others slow. Prices on these birds are slightly easier this week, with No. 1 over 2 lbs. 13 at 13c; No. 2, 10 at 11c; No. 1 leghorns, 11c and No. 2, 9c. Dealers of fowl fairly large, but prices steady: No. 1 fowl over 4 lbs. 9c; No. 1 under 4 lbs. 7c; No. 2, 5c, roosters, 5c. EGGS—Receipts rather light white quality, not up to standard. Holding at shipping point and but weather affecting grade. Demand sufficient to keep market cleaned up. Prices steady, with extras, 14 at 15c; firsts 12 at 13c, and seconds, 9c.

HAY—OATS—GREENFEED

HAY—Now upland supplies rolling into market, but no timothy of consequence yet offered. Market price unsettled, as sellers ask one figure and jobbers another. Upland ranges from $9.50 to $11.50 and timothy $15 per ton, at country points. FEED OATS—Market unchanged, with 25c per bushel the prevailing price for supplies delivered. Receipts fair, but demand is drab.

PRESENTS UNIQUE RELICS TO MUSEUM

REMARKABLE EXAMPLES OF BLACKFOOT CRAFT FOR UNIVERSITY

MONTREAL—One of the most valuable collections of Indian relics in possession of McGill University has been received by E. Lionel Judah, curator of the university's museum. The gift is from E. Hayter Reid, for many years a student of Indian customs in Western Canada and now a resident of this city.

"The collection is really quite remarkable," Mr. Judah said, "because it contains many things that cannot be replaced today. These are the products of Blackfoot Indians, the Indians of the plains."

There are Blackfoot saddles of rich design, and one war headdress made of fine eagle feathers. The curator explained that eagle feathers are so exorbitant in price at present that Indians cannot afford a full eagle headdress and mix the eagle feathers with those of the turkey.

Long leather squaw dresses, some of them heavily embroidered with beads and porcupine quills; an apron weighing about 15 pounds and made of solid beadwork in an attractive design; heavy bands of rawhide in the shape of plaques for dress ornaments; a tomahawk and squaw's leggings are among the outstanding exhibits.

From the Mackenzie River delta, Mr. Reid has donated an Indian belt, made of porcupine quills in delicate designs. The belt probably graced a giant, for the waist measure is huge.

BANK OF MONTREAL TENTH CROP REPORT

Exceptionally uniform reports of the satisfactory progress of practically all crops come from nearly every district in Quebec, Ontario and the Maritime Provinces, and in British Columbia most crops are also giving promise of good yields. Hay crops in the eastern portion of the Dominion have been heavy, and cereal harvesting has begun with excellent prospects, except in the case of oats in Ontario which suffered material damage through rust and smut. In the Prairie Provinces harvesting has begun and will shortly be general as ripening has proceeded satisfactorily except in parts of Alberta where it has been retarded by cold, wet weather. The season is now too far advanced for any material improvement up on the previous estimates of grain yields much below normal, nevertheless rains during the past week have improved fodder and late crops. Details follow:

Alberta. In the north-eastern area with a continuation of the warm weather of the past two days, cutting should commence within two weeks. In the Southeastern area cutting has commenced and will be general shortly. Wheat should grade well, but the yield will be light. Western area—Rains have helped filling but warmer weather is required to mature the crop. Wheat cutting has commenced in the south where yields, except on summerfallow will be light and some grain fields may be used for sheep pasture. The sugar beet crop is making good progress. Saskatchewan—In the northern area harvesting of wheat has commenced in some localities and should be general by the 20th. Prospects vary from good to very poor. There will be no shortage of feed. Southern area—Where wheat is worth cutting, harvesting is underway. A large area has suffered total failure and most favoured districts will have little more than seed.

Peace

THE extent to which you and I are creatures of habit is simply marvellous. Even after we have become convinced that certain things we do are detrimental to health we continue along the same line. We know that a certain manner of living will not result in the building up of the best type of moral fibre, yet we go on, and on, in the same old way. We're so much the creatures of habit.

Children are different. They have not lived sufficiently long to succumb to habit. Their outlook upon life contains much more of the elements of freedom, honesty, width of viewpoint and frank speech.

A youngster—so the story goes—once said to his dad: "Dad, what are ancestors?" "Well, my boy," the father answered, "I am one of your ancestors. Your old Aunt Mary may be spoken of as another." After a few moments' quiet, then the poser came. "Well, then, Dad, why do people brag about their ancestors?"

Even upon some of the great matters in which the whole world is interested, the simplicity and directness of the child is phenomenal. For sheer, sound, though stimulating philosophy, however, the old poem that used to grace the pages of one of the old school readers illustrates the simple, but intelligent attitude of the child before it became a slave to convention, before it acquired the habit of doing things this way or that, simply because "everybody's doing it."

I've forgotten the words. I'm not sure that I ever memorized them. Anyway, "It was a summer's evening, old Kaspar's work was done." He sat musing at the door of his cottage. Two children, Peterkin and his grandchild, Wilhelmie, played near by. Peterkin, I think it was, found a man's skull somewhere in the yard or in the fields. They brought it to the old man and questioned him, childlike, regarding it. What is this thing so "large, and smooth, and round?" Old Kaspar became thoughtful. He immediately began to live during days long past. "Tis some poor fellow's skull," said he, "who died in the great victory." At least his thought was expressed somewhat in this way. So the conversation continued and finally from one of the children, "But tell us all about the war, and what they killed each other for." "Oh, that I cannot tell," he said, "but 'twas a famous victory."

At the same time grown-ups must not succumb to the habit of taking a too gloomy outlook. Somebody said "God's in heaven, all's right with the world."

The League of Nations, peace organizations in many countries, international gatherings—B'nai B'rith, Kiwanis, World Poultry Congresses, Chambers of Commerce, church conferences, educational conventions, the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference to be held at Regina in 1932—all may be regarded as activities in the direction of world peace. Though many of these are not designed as direct peace movements, they do yield an enormous influence in that direction.

The Peace Tower at Ottawa stands as a permanent, every-day symbol proclaiming the will of the Canadian people for the peace of all the world.

KIDNEY DISEASE

Waste products are produced in the body as the result of the activities of the body. The body gets rid of these waste products through the eliminative organs, of which the kidneys are two important members. The blood passes through the kidneys and there the waste substances present in the blood and which are to be passed out of the body are eliminated.

The normal healthy kidney does this readily. There is a large margin of safety and so the kidneys are able to do their work properly as long as they are healthy. Indeed one healthy kidney is capable of doing the whole work, consequently if one kidney is diseased, it can be removed as long as the other one is healthy.

As is the case with other organs of the body, the kidneys may suffer from disease. The term nephritis means inflammation of the kidney. The inflammation may be acute or chronic, and so we have conditions which are known as acute nephritis and chronic nephritis.

In chronic nephritis or Bright's disease, the tissues of the kidney, which carry on the function of waste removal from the blood passing through the kidneys are destroyed. The amount of destruction and whether or not further destruction takes place depend upon the cause and upon how long it continues to act.

Chronic nephritis is a very apt to be progressive because, as a rule, it is allowed to go on for a long time untreated as the condition is not recognized. The kidney functions improperly. It allows substances to pass out which should remain in the blood and it fails to eliminate the substances which should pass out, as a result of which they are thrown back into the body.

Chronic nephritis may follow the

What the Ice Age looked like, millions of years ago, is exactly pictured in the great Columbia ice-field, extending for hundreds of miles in the Rockies, and easily accessible from Lake Louise, said Walter L. The field extends in the form of glaciers to three sides from which mighty rivers run to the Arctic, Pacific and Atlantic oceans.

acute disease. The individual who over-eats or who consumes excessive amounts of rich foods or alcohol throws a heavy strain on the kidneys and this may lead to their wearing out. Hardening of the arteries interferes with the blood supply of the kidney, and the tissues of the kidney suffer as a result. Wearing out of heart, arteries and kidneys often occur together.

Once the kidneys are known to be damaged, the right thing to do is to protect them as much as possible. The amount of work which they are called upon to do should be reduced. This can be done by practicing moderation in diet and by taking care of the body through fresh air, sunshine and rest.

The treatment needed in each case can only be decided upon after the necessary examinations and tests have shown the extent of the condition. It is chiefly a question of how to give the kidneys as much rest as possible and so enable them to recover or, at least, not to become worse.

The periodic health examinations allow for the early detection of any abnormal kidney condition, and this is one reason why such examinations are desirable.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College St., Toronto, will be answered personally, by letter.

JOYFUL JAMS AND JELLIES

So you are about to make jams and jellies.

Did you ever stop to think just why you do certain things? Why, for example, you put sugar with the fruit juice? Because, naturally, the fruit juice is not sweet enough.

But there are other elements, in addition to sugar in which many fruits are deficient. Pectin, for instance. Just as some fruits require more sugar than others, so some need more pectin to give body to jams, and to make jellies jelly. And now, with bottled fruit pectin, it is as easy to supply the needed pectin as it is to supply the proper amount of sugar.

Here are two recipes which include its use. They assure certain, easy and rapid jam and jelly making.

Cherry Jam.
(Any kind except wild cherry or chokecherry)

4 packed cups (2 lbs.) pitted, crushed cherries
1/4 cup water
7 cups (3 lbs.) sugar
1 bottle fruit pectin

Use only fully ripened fruit. Pit cherries, crush thoroughly, and measure into large kettle. Add water, stir until mixture boils, cover, and simmer 15 minutes. Add sugar, mix, and bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard 3 minutes. Remove from fire and stir in fruit pectin. Then stir and skim by turns for just 5 minutes to cool slightly, to prevent floating fruit. Pour quickly. Cover hot jam with film of hot paraffin; when jam is cold, cover with 1/2 inch of hot paraffin. Roll the glass to spread paraffin on sides. For stronger cherry flavor, add 1/4 teaspoon almond extract before pouring. Sweet cherry jam sets slowly. Requires 2 1/4 pounds of fruit. Makes 10 to 11 eight-ounce glasses.

Sour cherries may be pitted and left whole. Pack cups solidly, flood with juice. Whole cherries will float and the jam may be soft on top for several days. Crustiness is recommended.

Raspberry Jelly
4 cups (2 lbs.) juice
7 1/2 cups (3 1/4 lbs.) sugar
1 bottle fruit pectin

Use only fully ripened berries. Crush thoroughly and drip through jelly bag. Do not drip over night as uncooked juice ferments quickly. Measure juice and sugar into large saucepan, stir and bring to a boil. At once add fruit pectin stirring constantly, and bring again to a full rolling boil and boil 1/2 minute. Remove from fire let stand 1 minute, skim pour quickly. Cover hot jelly with a film of hot paraffin; when jelly is cold cover with 1/2 inch of hot paraffin. Roll glass to spread paraffin on sides. Black raspberry jelly sets slowly. Requires about 3 quarts berries. Makes about 11 eight-ounce glasses.

THOSE FOREIGN CAKES

There is always a thrill in being able to introduce some favorite cake to your guests under a foreign name. Somehow it seems... well, its "class" to say the least. Here are two recipes for real aristocratic cakes—in taste as well as in name:

Genoise Cake

(4 eggs)

1 1/2 cups special cake flour, sifted
1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 cup butter
1 cup powdered sugar
1/2 teaspoon lemon extract
4 eggs, well beaten

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add flavoring. Add eggs, alternately with flour, a small amount at a time, beating well after each addition. Turn into greased paper-lined pan 8x8x2 inches. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 50 minutes.

Madeira Cake

(2 eggs)

1 1/2 cups special cake flour, sifted
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 cup butter
1/2 cup sugar
2 eggs, unbeaten
6 tablespoons lemon extract

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Reduce the Acid

SICK stomachs, sour stomachs and indigestion usually mean excess acid. The stomach nerves are over-stimulated. Too much acid makes the stomach and intestines sour. Alkali kills acid instantly. The best form is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia, because one harmless dose neutralizes many times its volume in acid. For 50 years the standard with physicians everywhere. Take a spoonful in water and your unhappy condition will probably end in five minutes. Then you will always know what to do. Crude and harmful methods will never appeal to you. Go prove this for your own sake. It may save a great many disagreeable hours. Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians in correcting excess acids.

ture out of some fairy book. Diane was like a bit of sky in her gown of blue chiffon; Barbara Ann looked like a wild columbine with the points of her yellow organdie blown by the wind.

And when Franklin slipped a narrow band, that looked like a ringlet of stars upon Diane's finger, and murmured "With this ring I thee wed," Russ looked into Barbara Ann's eyes and found that there were tears, tears which twinkled deftly like dew upon forget-me-nots. And his thoughts ran along that imperceptible little wave from his eyes to hers: "After all, we both know there's something in this marriage thing!"

There was laughter after that—laughter and rice and the throwing of old shoes, rapid kisses, and the honeymoon car left a little mark down the gravelled driveway from the tin case which Russ and Barbara Ann had tied on.

And after a while Barbara Ann and Russ were left alone. The tables had been cleared away and the gardener had swept up the rice.

"Shall we open the golf courses up again, Barbara Ann?" Russ asked, feeling suddenly that all the excitement had dropped into the earth and had left everything flat and dull.

"No, let's not. I'm tired. I'd like to be alone. The golf thing was just a pretext, Russ. There's no need for it now." "Then we're through with this hate game?" "Yes—quite!" she said emphatically. "Who won? Remember, we were to be our own judges!" he laughed, trying to bring the old fire into her eyes.

"Nobody won, Russ; we're even!" "I guess you're right. Come on, Jeavons. We've got two months of peace. It's going to be heavenly! Russ, knowing that we won't have to see one another at all."

"Two months," he said, putting on his hat, "won't be time enough!"

But two months is sometimes more than sixty days, when you stop to think about it, and Barbara and Russ during the weeks that followed, did stop to think. There was nothing much besides that to do. Of course, they went into town alone. They sat through the same shows alone, and both of them managed to look up old acquaintances.

But something was missing, something neither of them could quite understand. So they got to taking long drives. Barbara Ann alone in her roadster with Priscilla sitting up at her back, and Russ alone in his smart little coupe, undeniably college-bred, with Jeavons on the running board. They would drive, for hours until the stars came out and it became quite cold.

Then they would go home. Priscilla would get warm milk, and Barbara Ann would sit at the table not at all hungry and very much alone.

And Jeavons got his bone and went off to sleep, but Russ looked down at a rather delectable steak, pushed the plate aside, strode into the living room and lighted his pipe. Something was wrong; maybe he ought to see a doctor.

They both saw a doctor at separate times and he very wisely recommended a stimulant—and a rest.

"Rest!" Barbara Ann cried out and the tears spilled down her face in torrents.

"Rest!" Russ yelled. "Why that's all I've had for a month!" And then they both went back home again, not eating. But once Barbara Ann did go to the window to see if the lights were on in the window across the street, and Russ took a walk to the fence just to make sure Barbara Ann was all right and there was a light burning.

And suddenly when Barbara Ann looked again, Russ's room was in darkness, snuffed out just as the wind would snuff the bloom from a candle flame. She went to the telephone, called a number, but Russ was not there. "He's just gone out. In there any message?" asked the housekeeper.

No there was no message, Barbara Ann replied. "But there is!" she cried to herself. "There is a message. You love him!"

Priscilla was curled up in front of the fire, fast asleep, and Barbara Ann gave a little cry of utter loneliness. She got down on the floor and buried her tear-stained face into the softness of Priscilla's neck. At last, completely weary, she pulled down a pillow, laid it beside the kitten and fell asleep.

It was there that Jeavons found them, Barbara Ann and Priscilla. He couldn't understand why Barbara Ann didn't move and the temptation to disturb Priscilla was utterly dispelled when he remembered that nip upon his nose. Priscilla spotted him out of the corner of her eye, but experience had taught her that there was no need to move.

Finally Jeavons crawled in between them, laid his head upon his front paws, and stared into the fire, his tail making a little thud upon the floor, like the distant stroke of a hammer. It was the thud that finally awakened Barbara Ann. "Jeavons!" she cried. "You darling! Where'd you come from?"

And Jeavons promptly jumped into her lap and sent his tongue scurrying across her face. "Jeavons, you're not fighting with Priscilla! What's happened?" She hugged him, squeezed him, and Jeavons liked it. His tail was doing a marathon, his tongue another one!

Russ stood in the doorway, a grin across his face. He felt that a miracle had healed him. In fact, he had never felt better in his whole life. He pushed the door aside, and walked directly up to Barbara Ann. He caught her arms and pulled her to her feet. "Barbara Ann," he said, strangely elated, "I love you!"

And she realized that from the beginning she had wanted to go into his arms like that, she had wanted him to hold her close, to kiss her over and over again as he was doing now. "Russell Hayes," she said, as his lips came closer to hers and she nestled deeper into his arms, "that makes us even again!"

BULBS FOR FALL PLANTING

(Experimental Farms Note)

Bulbous plants witch bloom early in the spring, and hence should be planted in the fall include Early Single, Early Double and Darwin tulips, squilla, grape hyacinths, chionodoxa and Exolition monatum tataricum. Hardy Niles and alliums, although later in blooming may also be planted to advantage in the fall.

At the Dominion Experimental Station at Rosthern, Early Single tulips have found the most satisfactory bulbs for fall planting. Their season is from May 20, until the middle of June. Bloom is usually scarce at this time and the bright colours of these early tulips add a very distinctive touch of beauty to the grounds.

It is rather expensive to buy fresh bulbs each year but this is not necessary sence these tulips continue to bloom for many years without replanting and without protection of any kind. They may be planted in the perennial border or used in beds where annual flowers are to be planted after the tulip bloom is over. Even bulbs that have been grown in pots for winter bloom if properly ripened in the pots may be planted out in the garden with success.

Early Double and Darwin tulips have not proved as hardy as the Early Single varieties but they usually come through the winter fairly well if protected by a mulch. They are later than the Early Single varieties and extend the season for the tulip bloom until late in June.

The blue squill (Scilla sibirica) is usually in bloom during the last week of April. It has proved quite hardy but the white form has not been tested.

Heavenly Blue a variety of muscari or grape hyacinth has come through three winters without injury. It blooms late in May.

Chionodoxa gigantea commonly known as Glory of the Snow, has proved quite hardy. The flowers are light blue and usually appear in April.

Exolition monatum tataricum is listed as related to the Anemones and is native of the Kenghis Steppes of Siberia. It grows about twenty inches high and has bright blue lily-like flowers which open about the middle of June.

Total increase in railway taxes during the 25 years from 1890 to 1925 in the United States was from $1 million to 421 million dollars, says Dr. Parmelee, Director, Bureau of Railway Economics. This, he asserts, has had an unfavorable effect both on industries and individuals.

J. H. Evans, Deputy Minister of Agriculture for Manitoba, states that, "in no branch of farm production in Manitoba has the price been so well maintained or the volume of business increased so much as in honey. Manitoba produced well over one-third of the total honey crop in Canada, the quality of which was unexcelled; and at the present rate of increase Manitoba will be the largest producer in the Dominion next year." 708

 From the time you thresh in October until May the next year, it would mean a charge to you for storage of $30.00

Now material for a granary 12'x14'x8' high with skids and shingled roof, will cost you only $60.00 to $80.00 right now and this granary will hold from 1200 to 1300 bushels of wheat.

Now is the time to commence building to be ready for storage of grain at threshing time. Pay us a visit. We will give you all figures to help you get a granary that actually won't cost you a dollar and you can use many years.
